THE FELLOWSHIP provides postdoctoral clinical and counseling psychologists with a concentrated training experience in which they (1) attain advanced clinical skills with a young adult population manifesting the broad spectrum of psychopathology and (2) develop expertise in the challenges prevalent in university mental health practice today. At the core of a Fellow's training are his or her clinical work, individual supervision, and participation in the team-work of the department. Fellows are viewed as emerging professional colleagues and given the collaborative support and guidance necessary to participate fully in the multidimensional service delivery of clinical services that is typical of college mental health settings. They inevitably acquire considerable depth and breadth in their treatment and consulting skills as they see over 100 clients and triage 40-50 others through psychological emergencies. With the concentrated exposure to a late-adolescent and young-adult clinical population, Fellows hone their formulation and treatment-planning skills, and they develop practical understanding of the intersections of psychopathology with developmental forces. They also gain experience with the unusual diagnostic and treatment challenges posed by those clients who present as both high-functioning and diagnostically quite troubled. Fellows complete the fellowship year with more than 1600 license-eligible hours of supervised practice and with a consolidated sense of their professional competence and personal career direction. In recent years, about half of our Fellows have gone on to acquire permanent positions in university mental health settings. The other half have gone on to work in private/group practices or mental health agencies.

UNIVERSITY COUNSELING SERVICES (UCS) is a relatively large and highly utilized university mental health center with primary responsibility for addressing the mental health needs of the Boston College student community. A committed staff of eleven psychologists and three psychiatrists provide a wide range of direct clinical services to approximately 1600 students each year. The department enjoys strong collaborative relationships with faculty, staff, administrators, and student groups, and it reaches the broader university network through indirect services such as consultation, outreach, and prevention programs.

Boston College (BC) has 12 undergraduate and graduate colleges and professional schools. BC students are bright, talented, and diverse. Approximately one-quarter of the student population identify themselves as persons of color, and the graduate student population, in particular, is substantially international. BC fosters an environment in which students are encouraged to integrate their intellectual growth and personal development. The clients seeking our clinical services are verbal, motivated, and still in the process of shaping key aspects of their identities. They are able to make use of self-exploration and insight-oriented interventions as well as cognitive-behavioral treatment strategies to achieve pivotal developmental changes. They make up a psychologically rich population with which Fellows can explore closely and intensively the practice of psychotherapy with late-adolescents and young adults.

UCS emphasizes psychodynamic, developmental, and culturally-sensitive approaches in formulating client difficulties, and it prioritizes brief, focused approaches to treatment while maintaining the flexibility to provide open-ended treatment, particularly for those clients with the greatest needs and/or the least resources.

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES in which Fellows can expect to further their expertise include the following:

- ◆ Intake, evaluation and treatment-planning. Fellows manage the intake, evaluation and treatment-planning for four new clients weekly. Generally, Fellows assume responsibility for determining and carrying out treatment interventions for those clients whom they see on intake. Learning how to balance the needs of a growing caseload of clients with diverse problems generally becomes a particular area of challenge and mastery for Fellows. Opportunities to refine skills in treatment planning, case disposition, and referral are provided through supervision, seminars, clinical case meetings, and collegial collaboration.
- ◆ Individual counseling and psychotherapy. Fellows readily establish caseloads which allow them to develop skills with a variety of clients and client issues. With three individual supervisors, they benefit from the varied input of clinicians who have different styles and approaches. While UCS generally provides shorter-term treatment, Fellows are typically able to see a limited number of clients in on-going psychotherapy over the course of the year.
- ◆ Group counseling and psychotherapy. Fellows have the opportunity to participate in designing and leading groups and are provided guidance to support them in this work. Generally, they have opportunities to lead or co-lead at least one therapy or support group during their year.
- ◆ Crisis intervention and emergency services. The UCS staff provides round-the-clock emergency response for the student body throughout the academic year. This work routinely involves collaboration with other care-givers, mental health professionals, university personnel, and students' family members. Fellows receive close training and have ready access to back-up consultation as they become full participants in the on-call system. They ultimately hold a weekly four-hour daytime shift, a bi-weekly overnight shift, and four full-weekend shifts throughout the fellowship year. Last year the department responded to over 660 mental health emergencies, which ranged from the expectable developmental and situational crises to more serious matters of acute Axis I and II symptoms, suicidality, and decompensation.
- ◆ Community consultation and outreach. Fellows have opportunities to develop consultation/liaison relationships with one or more university departments or organizations. Along with the staff psychologists, Fellows participate in formal 1:1 liaison relationships with staff from the Office of Residential Life. They also join with UCS staff to offer psycho-educational programs, training, and consultation to various campus groups throughout the year. Often additional opportunities develop from a Fellow's pursuit of his or her own interests and ideas.

THE TRAINING PROGRAM is comprised of a combination of activities that emphasize learning through participation in the multidimensional roles and functions of university mental health practitioners. Nine members of the permanent UCS staff form the training committee. The training staff represents considerable expertise in university mental health and a strong commitment to training new professionals. After training predoctoral interns for many years, we began training postdoctoral clinical and counseling psychologists in 1992 and have enjoyed expanding the fellowship program in recent years with the support of the institution.

Supervision is seen as the most critical piece of clinical training as it provides Fellows with the opportunity to explore their work with careful attention and thoughtfulness. Fellows receive at least two hours of individual supervision per week and are encouraged to collaborate with supervisors of different therapeutic styles, theoretical approaches, and clinical interests. Fellows also receive 1 ½ hours of group supervision per week with a Training Committee member.

Didactic sessions and workshops on topics specifically relevant to the provision of psychological services to college students are generally clustered during the comprehensive two-week orientation program scheduled for Fellows in late August. A series of Professional Practice Seminars for Fellows occurs across the year, covering topics related to professional identity and career development. An ongoing Multicultural Conversations Seminar explores issues of cultural identity as it applies to the clinical work encountered in our service. Additionally, the department hosts a number of Professional Development Seminars which provide training tailored to the needs and interests of the UCS psychology staff. Presenters for these seminars are chosen for their expertise in specific topics. UCS is approved by the APA to grant Continuing Education Units to psychologists for the latter series of training activities.

Fellows participate in the weekly Clinical Case Conference which is attended by the department's entire clinical staff. This is a forum for presenting and consulting about cases of particular interest and complexity. Case Conference provides staff an opportunity to clarify clinical and administrative issues in difficult cases and exchange a variety of perspectives regarding formulation, therapy process, and treatment planning. Fellows also participate with staff in a regularly scheduled Staff Meeting, which focuses on the administrative business of the department and its operations within the systems of the university setting. Program planning, the clarification of policies and best-practices, and the discussion of student-life issues are among the matters typically addressed in this meeting.

Additionally, Fellows may take advantage of an opportunity to co-facilitate a supervision seminar for advanced practicum students in the Counseling Psychology Ph.D. program.

In accordance with APPIC standards, the training program provides a structured process for Fellows to be evaluated, generally once or twice a year. Mid-year evaluations are written and discussed formally with Fellows, but mutual feedback is encouraged in an informal ongoing manner throughout the year. Year-end evaluations are geared toward supporting Fellows in their transition toward employment, and they tend to be less structured than those conducted at mid-year. The training program has a well-defined due-process procedure in the event Fellows encounter difficulties in the training experience.

The department's training committee has meetings throughout the year to discuss issues pertinent to the training program, including the progress and performance of Fellows. Supervisors consult one another about the performance and supervision of Fellows. Material from supervision may be discussed in these contexts in order to aid Fellows' development and maintain the highest level of clinical care for clients of UCS.

DIVERSITY

The postdoctoral training program is highly invested in recognizing and honoring diversity among its staff, postdoctoral Fellows, and clients. UCS devotes both resources and attention to fostering an environment that values awareness and appreciation for matters of difference.

At the larger institutional level, BC recruits and supports a student body that is increasingly comprised of persons of color and persons who come from backgrounds of social and economic disenfranchisement. Presently, the proportion of students identified as AHANA (African American, Hispanic, Asian, and Native American) is approximately 25%. The additional number of students of less demonstrable, but non-dominant ethnic, cultural, and socioeconomic origins is notable. Students of all these backgrounds are clearly visible among the population seen by our service.

We encourage Fellows of color and Fellows who otherwise have the experience of being under-represented to make use of the mentoring opportunities available to them with our supervisors and staff. We also invite them to develop useful connections outside of the department with students, staff, and/or faculty. At all levels, we believe this enhances our work and the futures of our Fellows.

STIPEND AND BENEFITS

We have three eleven-month, full-time postdoctoral positions available. Each fellowship position has a minimum stipend of $33,141 for its eleven-month duration and a full-benefits package that includes medical, dental, vacation, and illness coverage, as well as a range of other perquisites.

APPLICATION PROCESS

We are committed to having a counseling service that is diverse and strongly encourage applicants of any racial, cultural, or minority background to apply to our postdoctoral fellowship program. Applicants must have completed all requirements for a doctoral degree from a regionally accredited institution of higher learning and a predoctoral internship that meets APPIC standards prior to beginning the fellowship on August 18, 2014. We cannot hire individuals who have not completed and defended their dissertations by mid-August. Candidates who have not been officially awarded their doctorates must be prepared to provide us with an official letter from their department or dissertation chair attesting to their predicted completion of all components of their doctoral program by August 18, 2014.

The application deadline is January 2, 2014.
