An expert on issues of international security, political economy, and global governance, Dr. Erickson is an assistant professor of political science and international studies at Boston College. Her forthcoming book, Dangerous Trade: Arms Exports, Human Rights, and International Reputation is about the spread of arms export controls regulating small and major conventional arms transfers to human rights violators and conflict zones.

Professor Erickson has authored numerous articles on the European arms trade, compliance with arms embargoes, and the UN Arms Trade Treaty process. She was recently awarded the Council for European Studies 2014 First Article Prize in the social sciences for her article, “Market Imperative Meets Normative Power: Human Rights and European Arms Transfer Policy,” which appeared in the European Journal of International Relations.

Professor Erickson has conducted extensive fieldwork in the United States and Europe, where she was a research fellow at the Stiftung Wissenschaft und Politik and the Wissenschaftszentrum in Berlin. She was also a Research Fellow at Dartmouth College in the War and Peace Studies Program at the John Sloan Dickey Center for International Understanding.
