COURSE OVERVIEW
This seminar is designed primarily for seniors majoring or minoring in International Studies. During the semester, I hope the course will accomplish four goals:

1) to provide the group with a common vocabulary for analyzing the current international environment - politically, economically and socially;
2) to encourage participants to think about future global relationships in an informed and constructive way;
3) to prepare students to write research papers on topics of their choice relating to International Studies; and
4) to exchange views, debate, question, research - all in an atmosphere of mutual respect and trust.

Toward these ends I have structured the first part of the semester, drawing on the assigned readings, including Jihad vs. MacWorld, by Benjamin Barber and The Post-American World, by Fareed Zakaria. After this initial phase, we shall be meeting to discuss each other's ongoing work in progress. Student input is vital, both to the content and organization of the seminar! Please share your concerns in the group, with me individually, or in both settings. I encourage you to become keenly interested in current events during this semester, and to bring into the seminar each week a discussion of real life events that may be explored using the framework we are developing.

COURSE REQUIREMENTS
Please print out and read the assigned readings for the day they are due, so that we may have a complete discussion with maximum participation each week. Class participation counts 20% of your grade.

There are but two writing assignments: First, a 10 pp. paper (due November 3rd) in which I will ask you to answer some questions relating to the readings. This paper counts 20% of your grade. Second, your Paper in International Studies, which is due by 4:00 p.m. on Wednesday, December 15, 2008 in my mailbox, Room 426 McGuinn. We shall be conferring about topics and lengths of these papers.
