In a 2015 report examining the educational backgrounds of C-suite executives in 630 companies belonging to the Fortune and S&P 500 (http://www.cristkolder.com/reports/Summer-2015-Volatility-Report-FINAL.pdf), Crist|Kolder Associates document that Accounting was almost twice as popular (187) as the runner-up major (Economics with 95) among CFOs and was also the fourth most popular major among CEOs.

Why is Accounting so important to a successful executive? In a world of Big Data, the accountants’ knowledge of how financial information is generated, translated and utilized provides a framework for understanding how entities operate and succeed.

At Boston College, we provide our accounting majors with the knowledge and skill set to succeed. In the latest CPA exam results (2014), BC candidates passed 72% of all sections of the exam compared to 47% nationally. For candidates who took the exam within one year of graduation, the pass rate is even more impressive at 82.5% compared to 59.7% nationally.

Not surprisingly, our graduates are highly sought after. In our 2015 survey of seniors before graduation, we find that 93% had already secured employment or were pursuing graduate school. Over half the class had obtained a position with one of the Big 4 accounting firms. They will join a large network of BC graduates. At year-end 2015, 1,360 BC alumni work for one of the Big 4 firms with 238 (18%) attaining the top positions of partner, principal or director.

BC ACCOUNTING GRADS’ MEDIAN STARTING SALARIES: 2013-2015

This graph tabulates the mean starting salaries and bonuses for the classes of 2013-2015 by type of firm and for all accounting graduates.

BC Alumni in the Big 4

1,360 BC alumni currently work for one of the Big 4 accounting firms. 18% (238) are partners, principals or directors and 24% (331) are managers or senior managers.
There are four parts to the CPA exam. Overall pass rates are calculated by dividing the total number of successful attempts by the total attempts in all four parts of the exam. CPA exam results are taken from the 2006-2014 Uniform CPA Examination School Performance book published by the National State Boards of Accountancy (NASBA).

This table presents the overall pass rates for first-time exam candidates who took the exam within one year of graduation. Because candidates can take the exam even without an accounting degree and can retake the exam multiple times, pass rates of first-time candidates taken within one year of graduation better reflect the results of recent accounting graduates.
