EagleEyes and Camera Mouse: Technologies Developed at BC for People with Severe Disabilities with Prof. James Gips

8:00 pm in Campion 139
The purpose of the EagleEyes Project at Boston College is to help people with severe physical disabilities develop and be educated to their fullest by enabling them to access the computer. We work with people, often children and young adults, who cannot speak and can move only their eyes or head.

During the past twenty years we have developed two access technologies:

EagleEyes allows people to control the computer by moving only their eyes. EagleEyes works through five electrodes placed on the person’s head. EagleEyes has had some dramatic success stories with children and young adults with Cerebral Palsy, Retts Syndrome, and other disorders.

Camera Mouse allows people to control the computer by moving their head. Camera Mouse works through a standard webcam connected to the computer. Over 3,000,000 copies of Camera Mouse have been downloaded for free from cameramouse.org for use by people with ALS, MS, stroke, traumatic brain injury, spinal cord injury.
