Learning through direct experience is an essential part of the very best legal education. Boston College Law School’s new Center for Experiential Learning combines clinical and experiential programs to provide students with a deeper understanding of what it means to practice law and to be career-ready upon graduation.

Our goal is to enable all students to participate in some form of experiential learning—from clinics that provide services ranging from civil litigation to overturning wrongful convictions, to externships at major law firms, businesses, and non-profits, to participation in our highly regarded and award-winning oral advocacy programs.

The Boston College Legal Services LAB was a pioneer in the field when it was founded over 45 years ago. It is a central component of the new center and has served as a model for clinics around the country.

Our new Ninth Circuit Appellate Project gives students the opportunity to brief and argue immigration cases before the Court of Appeals in California. BC Law is part of a special Ninth Circuit program with a limited number of law schools—the only school outside of the court’s boundaries that is included.
IN-HOUSE DIRECT SERVICE PROGRAMS

CALIFORNIA NINTH CIRCUIT APPELLATE PROJECT
In court, students brief and argue immigration cases brought by indigent clients who would otherwise be without counsel. Cases include asylum, withholding and CAT claims, immigration consequences of criminal convictions, and issues of first impression.

CIVIL LITIGATION CLINIC
Students represent clients in every aspect of civil litigation, including discovery, settlement negotiations, trials, and employment, family, housing, and public benefits matters.

COMMUNITY ENTERPRISE CLINIC (CEC)
Students provide corporate, employment, tax, and other legal services to local small businesses and nonprofits.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE CLINIC—DEFENSE
The BC Defenders represent clients charged with crimes and probation violations in the Boston Municipal Court.

CRIMINAL JUSTICE CLINIC—PROSECUTION
Students handle arraignments, motions, and trials under the supervision of an assistant district attorney.

HOUSING LAW CLINIC
Students litigate cases in local district courts and the Boston Housing Court on behalf of individuals who are homeless or risk becoming homeless. Activities also include working with housing authorities and community organizations.

IMMIGRATION CLINIC
Students represent noncitizens in applications for legal status.

INNOCENCE PROGRAM CLINIC
Students work on postconviction screening, transcript review, and litigation of cases of prisoners who assert their innocence.

JUVENILE RIGHTS ADVOCACY PROJECT (JRAP)
Students represent youth in special education advocacy, school disciplinary proceedings, administrative advocacy before agencies, and in Juvenile Court status offense cases. Students also work as guardians ad litem and on policy development.

EXTERNSHIPS

ATTORNEY GENERAL PROGRAM
During a full year at the Massachusetts Attorney General’s Office, students practice under the supervision of an assistant attorney general on litigation, drafting legal documents, and researching and writing trial and appellate briefs. Students also argue matters in Superior Court on behalf of state agencies.
Flexible Externships
By arrangement with a faculty member, students may develop individualized externship placements at nonprofit organizations, government agencies, or law firms.

Immigration Externship Program
Students work either off campus at a firm or nonprofit organization or on campus with the Post-Deportation Human Rights Project on cases of asylum, domestic violence, employment, or deportation defense.

Innocence Program Externship
Students study the problem of wrongful convictions and provide pro bono legal assistance to prisoners who maintain their innocence. Participants choose an externship placement at the New England Innocence Project or the Committee for Public Counsel Services.

London Program
At London’s King’s College, students study international aspects of regulatory processes in areas including environment, security, antitrust, intellectual property, and human rights. An externship component places students in London law firms, businesses, and nonprofits. The program also offers externships in Paris, where students work for local businesses while attending King’s College classes remotely using videoconferencing software.

Semester in Practice
Students work in government agencies, law firms, nonprofit organizations, businesses, and courts under the supervision of experienced attorneys.

Semester in Practice: International Human Rights
Students work in international organizations focusing on human rights, immigration, and other public interest issues.

Judicial Internships

Judge and Community Courts
Students have clerkship-like placements with justices of the District Court, Boston Municipal Court, Juvenile Court, and Housing Court departments and are assigned research and writing projects.

Judicial Process—Appeals
Students work two days per week for a judge in the Massachusetts Appeals Court, assisting in drafting judicial decisions and observing oral arguments. They discuss their experiences at biweekly seminar meetings.

Judicial Process—Trials
Students observe a series of Massachusetts Superior Court judges once a week in both civil and criminal proceedings and compare and contrast the judges during a weekly seminar.
