

Living in Boston

A quintessential college town, Boston is a great place to study and live. As a graduate student at the Lynch School of Education, your housing choices are many and varied.

With downtown Boston only minutes away, Boston College offers an enclosed suburban setting with close proximity to the thriving life of the city. Graduate students at the Lynch School can choose to live near campus in the quiet community of Chestnut Hill, or within easy commuting distance in one of Boston's lively neighborhoods.

Graduate Housing

The Office of Residential Life offers a limited number of furnished rental apartments to full-time Boston College graduate students. Apartments are located in the Brighton area within a mile of our campus, and offer studio, one bedroom, and two bedroom options. All locations offer married and family housing as well.

Off-Campus Housing

Boston's diverse neighborhoods offer a wide array of housing options, ranging from Victorian houses to converted warehouses to artsy lofts. Boston College's Office of Residence Life maintains extensive lists of available rentals, students looking for roommates, and helpful local realtors. Residence Life also hosts a housing fair each June.
