

request for position as an undergraduate research fellow (UGRF)

The Undergraduate Research Fellow program is a successful program that introduces high-achieving Connell School students to the real-live world of research. Students work with faculty on research projects and are paid by the university. The number of hours per week is negotiated with the faculty member and is subject to budgetary considerations. The program is open to upperclassmen and highly motivated underclassmen. Matching of students with faculty occurs in the summer, and the deadline for submission of this form (to Cathy Read) is June 1.

Student name:

Class of:

Phone number where you can be reached:

Foreign language proficiency, if any:

Brief description of why you would like this position, specific areas of interest (if any), and what you think you would bring to the program:

If you previously served as a UGRF, list presentations, publications, or other outcomes.
