The Department of Campus Ministry of Loyola University Chicago announces recruitment for the

T.H.E.A. Coordinator Position

In November of 2015, the Lilly Endowment awarded Loyola University Chicago a $600,000 grant to launch a summer theology institute for high school students, Theology of Healing Earth in Action (THEA). The THEA Institute will engage high school students in Catholic theology and Ignatian spirituality so that they might act as socially just leaders who care for creation in their local communities and the world. The grant is four years with planning commencing in 2016. Institutes will be offered in 2017, 2018 and 2019.

The T.H.E.A. Coordinator will split duties between the Lilly Grant (50%) and Campus Ministry (50%).

Duties related to the grant, include serving on the steering committee, developing marketing materials for the Institute, recruiting high school students, forming the college student leaders, coordinating on-site logistics, and serving on site during the actual institutes. The coordinator assesses student learning outcomes and provides a written report to Lilly annually. Some travel is required both regionally and nationally to recruit high school students for the institute.

Duties related to Campus Ministry include serving on two retreats annually, and outreach to multi-cultural and religiously diverse student organizations on campus, along with general pastoral support to students.

This position requires some evenings and some weekends.

Candidates possessing an M.Div. or M.A. in theology or related field, plus three years of pastoral ministry experience are encouraged to apply. Other qualifications include knowledge of young adult faith development, ability to articulate Loyola’s Jesuit, Catholic mission, and proven ability to work with students, staff and faculty from diverse faith and cultural backgrounds. Spanish language proficiency is highly desired.
