Deportation Nation
Outsiders in American History

February 23, 2012
4:00—5:15 pm
McCormick Tribune Center
Evanston
Reception to follow

Prof. Kanstroom will discuss deportation enforcement in the United States, a ‘nation of immigrants’ that has undertaken a radical, unprecedented social experiment. Although deportation is at least as old as the modern nation-state, we have never before seen an immigration enforcement system of the size, ferocity, and scope that has been built, ironically, in one of history’s most open and immigrant-friendly societies. More than a decade later, it is time to consider the justifications, accomplishments, and failures of this system.

Daniel Kanstroom, Professor of Law & Director of the International Human Rights Program at Boston College Law School and founder of the Post-Deportation Human Rights Project

With a response by Prof. Jacqueline Stevens Northwestern Political Science & Legal Studies

This event is generously co-sponsored by: Political Science, Sociology, Latino/a Studies, African-American Studies, Asian American Studies, International Studies, and the Center for Forced Migration Studies.

For more information contact legalstudies@northwestern.edu