PROGRAM OVERVIEW

Our macro curriculum is the first comprehensive social work graduate program to train social workers in social innovation and leadership specifically. Our students leave the program prepared for careers that we believe, ultimately, can transform social and human service for the 21st Century. This curriculum brings social work and social workers into the social innovation realm – one traditionally occupied by other professional schools, such as business or public policy – while remaining focused on the social justice issues core to our profession.

COURSES + CURRICULA

- Social Innovation
- Financial Management and Resource Development
- Leadership and Social Transformation

Detailed course descriptions, requirements, and curriculum plans are available on our website.

In the curriculum, students will learn the basics of sound management, public policy development and advocacy, community assessment and human and resource management. In addition, students will learn processes for creative problem solving, rapid prototyping of solutions, ideation and how to help drive innovation from within. Taken together, the curriculum prepares students for leadership from within organizations throughout their careers, and to be drivers of change in response to the constantly changing social issues around us. Students are prepared to compete for jobs in traditional social work fields as well as non-traditional industries.

FIELD PLACEMENTS

We offer intensive, experiential field placements at leading human service organizations. Visit our website to see a complete listing of field placement sites and opportunities.
