Full-Time Religion Teacher - St. Joseph’s Collegiate Institute

Position Start Date: September 1, 2013

Appointment: Probationary

St. Joseph’s Collegiate Institute is the premier Catholic, independent college-preparatory high school for young men in Western New York. For the past 152 years, students have received a broad and balanced, human and Christian education in the tradition of our founder, St. John Baptist de La Salle.

Role and Responsibilities
The successful candidate will be responsible for teaching high school level religion. They will be expected to participate fully in all obligations of a high school teacher – including proctoring assignments, chaperoning events, attending extracurricular programming, and taking a leadership role as a model for the students, and as a member of our professional community.

Qualifications, Skills and Education Requirements
The ideal candidate is engaged in experiences that are aligned with the mission of St. Joseph’s Collegiate Institute. Content expertise is expected, as is the desire and ability to teach students of diverse backgrounds on an individual level. The desire to contribute as a life-long learner as part of a true professional learning community is a must. Appropriate degrees are required. A completed (or in-progress) Master’s degree is preferable.

Preferred Skills
The ideal candidate must possess skills in adapting content to students with diverse learning needs and skills an incorporating modern and ever-changing educational technology to suit students’ learning.
