

Message from the Director

October finds us in the midst of advising. As noted in our August and September newsletters, students should be attending our Study Abroad 101s throughout the fall in anticipation of the January 5, 2023 application deadline for all semester programs. As you complete the 101s and can access your study abroad application, we ask students to continue their abroad research via our website and each partner university's website. This is also a good time to meet with one of our regional Program Managers. Our Program Managers are ready to answer all your abroad questions. Appointments have resumed in person at Hovey House.

As you research program choices, OGE recommends searching beyond the large cities and focus on smaller regional cities, in Europe and beyond. Students will learn in the Study Abroad 101s, that both the spring semester and large cities are the most popular choices. OGE cannot guarantee students will get their first or second choices. Please review fall options as well as less traditional locations. More competitive programs will list the typical number of applicants and potential spots available on their Program Pages. The spring semester is competitive and students should plan well in advance, keeping in mind OGE's responsibility to equally balance enrollment across the fall and spring semesters.

In this newsletter, you will find more information regarding our newly announced 2023 summer program offerings. We offer dozens of faculty-led summer programs, as well as internship programs in various locations throughout Asia, Africa, Europe and Latin America. More information is highlighted in the newsletter.

Good luck and please contact our office if you have any questions or concerns.

Regards,

Larry Pickener
Director, Office of Global Education
