

BOSTON COLLEGE

Off-Campus Student Address Policy

Office of the Vice President of Student Affairs

It is the policy of Boston College to collect addresses for all students not living on campus. The ability to identify where a student lives off campus better enables the University to contact students in case of family or other emergencies and also to better respond to crises that occur off campus (e.g., fires, criminal activity). Additionally, when a complaint is filed about an off-campus house or apartment, accurate address information will allow the University to determine if, in fact, the residents are Boston College students.

Failure to provide the University with a valid local address by the date specified by Student Services or the Office of Residential Life could result in an administrative hold being placed on the student; providing a false address would be treated as a conduct infraction.
