Gratitude for Mentors

As the Thanksgiving break ends, on the theme of being thankful, think about how all our lives are enriched by the academic, career and personal mentors in our lives. Those formal or informal mentors may not even realize the impact they have on our lives, whether it is walking us through new situations or listening to the details of a difficult decision or even if it is to challenge our ways of thinking - they are helping us to create meaning from our goals. Mentors can even do a lot in situations where you may not even realize the impact they have on our lives, whether it is walking us through new situations or listening to the details of a difficult decision or even if it is to challenge our ways of thinking. They are helping us to create meaning from our goals. Mentors can even do a lot in situations or listening to the details of a difficult decision or even if it is to challenge our ways of thinking.

William & Mary. Register for the webinar

This event is open to students from Yale, Boston College, Harvard, Brown, Swarthmore, Princeton and the Network will be our speaker. Ever heard the term CDFI or Community Development Financial Institute but not sure what that really means? Join us on Tuesday, November 30, 2021, from 4:30pm to 5:30pm to learn how you can have a career with a purpose. OFN will introduce you to CDFIs and provide examples of how these organizations are making a difference in the lives of individuals and communities. RSVP here: https://bit.ly/WINWeeklyDiscussions
