The Department of Educational Leadership and Higher Education seek’s a master’s-level graduate research assistant for 10 hours per week, nine-month position beginning September 1, 2021 through May 31, 2022. In this position, you will work closely with Dr. Angela Boatman, an associate professor in the Higher Education program and Katrina Borowiec, a PhD Candidate in Measurement, Evaluation, Statistics, and Assessment, on a mixed-methods research project focused on improving measures of financial literacy, wellness, and attitudes among college students funded by The National Endowment for Financial Education (NEFE).

This position provides an opportunity to learn about financial literacy and wellbeing among students in postsecondary education, while developing your skills in data collection, project management, and conducting literature reviews. Depending on the research assistant’s interests, there may be opportunities to learn how to conduct interviews, analyze interview data, design surveys, and analyze survey data.

Stipend: $6,500

Qualifications:
- Current master’s student at Boston College
- Strong communication skills
- Strong organizational skills and time management
- Strong attention to detail
- Ability to handle sensitive and confidential information
- Prior data collection experience is a plus

Tasks & Responsibilities:
- Assist with the recruitment and scheduling of interview participants
- Assist with the clean-up of interview transcripts
- Conduct literature reviews
- Review and “test” survey instruments
- Other research-related duties as assigned

To apply or inquire about this position, please email Katrina Borowiec at katrina.borowiec@bc.edu by August 30, 2021. Please include your resume and a paragraph describing your interest in this position. Also, please let us know if you have any other paid positions at Boston College for the 2021-22 academic year and for how many hours per week you are scheduled to work.