Law, Policy, and Politics of Higher Education in the (Inter)national Context [SM21; SM22; SM23]

ONLINE AND HYBRID COURSE DEVELOPMENT

Online: Education Law and Public Policy

Worked with the Boston College Center for Teaching Excellence to develop and translate a face-to-face course to online platform. The course provides a survey of education law topics, for example, right to education issues, discrimination based on race/ethnicity, gender discrimination, and religious discrimination. The course integrates multi-media to enhance student learning, such as practitioner expert videos and Zoom sessions. All weekly course discussions and activities, including a week-long policymaking exercise, were new to this version course. Further revisions have improved the course.

Hybrid: Law, Policy, and Politics of Higher Education in the (Inter)national Context

Worked with the Boston College Center for Teaching Excellence and Center for Innovative Design Learning to co-design the course (w/Dr. Angela Boatman). The course introduces doctoral students (Ed.D. in Higher Education) to the U.S. legal and political system and comparative systems across the world, as they examine substantive policy issues from multiple perspectives. Students explore how law and public policy impedes or strengthens higher education's ability to produce graduates and strengthen democratic society, and investigate how political contexts affect the law and public policy in higher education.
