CURA PSYCHOLOGIA

Cultivating a More Virtuous Psychological Science

Third Convening - Georgetown University, November 2-4, 2023

DEAR FACULTY AMBASSADORS,

Welcome to the historic campus of Georgetown University for the third of our biannual convenings. This marks the start of year two of our Project and, to speak candidly, the first year greatly surpassed our hopes and expectations. Not only are many of you well on your way to producing the kind of deep, rigorous research that truly interdisciplinary exchange can produce, you have also forged meaningful friendships with one another and, importantly, demonstrated the virtues of humility, hospitality, and openness that such friendships demand.

Reflecting back on the last academic year, we were struck by the number of times the two of us heard from you – individually or in groups – about the various ways this Project was having an impact on your work and your lives. There is nothing more rewarding than to know that you have grown from this experience as each of us has grown in significant ways along with you.

"The human I is not a unity closed upon itself, like the uniqueness of the atom, but rather an opening, that of responsibility, which is the true beginning of the human and spirituality."

— EMMANUEL LEVINAS, IS IT RIGHTEOUS TO BE?

We are truly grateful for your dedication, your talents, and your support, and we cannot wait to embark upon another year of rich collaboration together.

Warmly,

David and Matt

Non-Reductive Psychological Accounts Of Religious Experience

Thursday Evening, November 2nd at 7 P.M. (ET) Copley Formal Lounge

Religious phenomena that include rituals and written accounts of spiritual experiences have been subject to psychological analysis for a long time. Some, like those of Freud, have been discounted as highly reductive and prejudicial while some like those of Jung have been discounted as no more than spiritual accounts in another form. The approach of William James has attracted more serious and measured consideration by scholarship interested in ways of analyzing religious phenomena using psychological tools. Dr. Ariel Glucklich's approach since the mid-1990s has been to simplify the task by focusing on religious phenomena that are both embodied and basic. By basic, he refers to affect-based events. This has included a study of the uses of pain in religious life and more recently, the uses of pleasure (both embodied and mental).

Speaker: Ariel Glucklich

Dr. Ariel Glucklich is a kibbutz-born Israeli who immigrated to the United States after the 1973 Middle East War. He has taught at the Hebrew University in Jerusalem, Claremont Graduate School, Pomona College, Emory University, St. Lawrence University and, finally, Georgetown.
