WELCOME TO BOSTON COLLEGE

This self-guided tour of the Chestnut Hill Campus highlights our facilities, from state-of-the-art academic buildings to our iconic athletic stadium and other Boston College treasures.

Enjoy your time and thank you for visiting!
Ministry; the and the offices of many organizations, including Campus Carney Halls, is McElroy Commons. This is a hub of student activities. At the far corner of Middle Campus, between Stokes and Higgins halls, is Higgins Hall, home of the biology, chemistry, and environmental sciences departments. The University radio station, The Eagle’s Nest on the second level and Carney’s on the third are two main dining facilities.

STOKES HALL

Upon opening in 2013, Stokes Hall received an award from the Institute of Classical Architecture. Today, Stokes Hall contains 36 state-of-the-art classrooms for teaching the sciences and the humanities. It is home to the classical studies, English, history, philosophy, and theology departments as well as to the Academic Advising Center. The Chocolate Bar coffee shop is located on the ground floor by the doorway to an outdoor amphitheater and garden—a popular spot for study and socializing.

GASSON QUAD

Gasson Quad is the epicenter of campus and a popular area for students to participate in everything from political activism to relaxing with friends.

GASSON HALL

Bult in 1913 in the English Gothic style, this iconic building is named for Thomas I. Gasson, S.J., 13th president of Boston College, under whose leadership the University moved from Boston’s South End to its current location. Gasson Hall was the first building at the new site. Today, the iconic building is the University’s assembly hall, now called the University’s assembly hall, now called the University’s assembly hall, now called the University’s assembly hall, now called the University’s assembly hall, now called the University’s assembly hall. The Gasson Quad is the epicenter of campus and a popular area for students to participate in everything from political activism to relaxing with friends.

FULTON HALL AND LYONS HALL

As you walk through the campus, you will notice the Gasson Quad, the location of the Office of Undergraduate Admission, which hosts thousands of visitors for Eagle Eye Campus Visits throughout the year. It is also home to the art, art history, film, and earth and environmental sciences departments. The University’s largest academic lecture hall is in Devlin Hall.

McELROY COMMONS

At the far corner of Middle Campus, between Stokes and Carney Halls, is McElroy Commons. This is a hub of student activity with the Boston College Bookstore, two dining halls, and the offices of many organizations, including Campus Ministry; the Heights, a student-run newspaper; and the Across Lindon Lane is St. Mary’s Hall, the primary residence of Boston College’s Jesuit community, which at 50 members is one of the largest in the world. In the north section of St. Mary’s Hall is the beautiful St. Mary’s Chapel. The south wing holds the communication and computer science departments as well as the Woods College of Advancing Studies. There is also a multi-faith chapel located down the hill from the main gate at 66 Commonwealth Avenue, where Protestant, Jewish, and Islamic services are held.

ROBSHAM THEATER ARTS CENTER AND CORCORAN COMMONS
From the entrance of Maloney Hall, turn left on Campanella Way toward the Robsham Theater Arts Center. With seating for nearly 600, this is the University’s largest performance venue and frequently features student theater, dance, and musical performances. Many public lectures are held in Robsham and it includes a smaller black box theater, scenery and costume shops, and a green room. Next to the theater is Corcoran Commons, which holds the largest dining hall on campus and several conference spaces. It is a great place for students to socialize and enjoy a variety of food stations on the ground and first floors. To the east of Corcoran Commons are additional residence halls, including the St. Thomas More Apartments—the location of University Health Services—and a T station, which offers convenient public transportation to downtown Boston.

FLYNN RECREATION COMPLEX
Across Campanella Way from Maloney Hall is the Flynn Recreation Complex, also known as “the Plex.” The space has a track, swimming pool, diving well, cardiovascular and aerobic equipment areas, and courts for basketball, tennis, volleyball, squash, and racquetball. Students can participate in group fitness activities throughout the year and there are rooms for dance, fencing, and yoga. In the spring of 2019, the Connell Recreation Center will officially open to replace the Plex.

MERKERT CHEMISTRY CENTER
At the far end of Middle Campus, between Conte Forum and Beacon Street, is the Merkert Chemistry Center, a nationally noted facility for research and teaching. It is the only building on campus dedicated to a single department.

CAMPION HALL, McGUINN HALL, AND CUSHING HALL
Along Beacon Street to the west of the Merkert Chemistry Center is Campion Hall. Originally built to house the female undergraduate students of Boston College, now it is home to the Lynch School of Education, named for Peter ’64 and Carolyn A. Lynch, longtime supporters of the University. The building is also the site of the Campus School, a special education day school for students ages 3–21, where many Boston College students volunteer. Further west along Beacon Street is McGuinn Hall, home to the political science, psychology, and sociology departments as well as to the Graduate School of Social Work. It contains a 260-seat auditorium that serves as both a lecture hall and venue for social events. North of Campion is Cushing Hall, which houses a lecture hall and classrooms.

CARNEY HALL
West of McGuinn, Carney Hall is home to the Office of Student Involvement, which encompasses most registered student organizations, including the Undergraduate Government of Boston College. on the Heights concert, featuring the Boston Pops Orchestra, and ALC Showdown, the student dance showcase. Alumni Stadium is home to the Boston College Eagles football team. It has 44,500 seats, and on game days you will witness a sea of students in their gold “superfan” shirts cheering on our beloved Eagles. The stadium also hosts commencement exercises and intramural sports. Next to Alumni Stadium is the Yawkey Athletics Center, which showcases the 1984 Heisman Trophy, won by alumnus Doug Flutie ’85.
