

is pleased to announce the 2018-2019 Graduate Symposium on Religion and Politics

VOCATION

in the

American Imagination

What does it mean to view work as a calling?

How does our shared American social imaginary and its underlying religious traditions shape different visions of vocation?

Can economics serve as the ground of good politics or are they necessarily opposed?

Join us once a month for a Meal and Discussion at the Boisi Center on readings by Jonathan Edwards, Alexis de Tocqueville, Hannah Arendt and Malcolm Harris, among others
