

WHAT WE'RE READING ON: CHILD CARE

The Importance of Childcare in Reopening the Economy

Childcare is a critical piece of our economic infrastructure that enables parents to “get to work” just like roads and bridges do for commuters.

Pandemic childcare closures could be terrible for women's careers

If childcare centers close, millions of women are likely to take up more unpaid labor in parenting or may even drop out of the labor force to raise their children, labor economists said.

Advocating for Children During the COVID-19 School Closures

Nationwide closures of elementary and secondary schools due to COVID-19 have severed nearly 60 million students from critical educational and health resources.
