

BOSTON COLLEGE LIBRARIES

STUDENT NEWSLETTER

Fall 2003

The Libraries Home Page: What's in it For You?

Becoming familiar with the library's home page will help you significantly in your course work. Not only does it provide immediate access to Quest, the library catalog, you can also search other resources such as journal databases (many with full-text) and electronic reference sources via the Online Databases page. Go here also for a list of e-journals, links to e-books, and connections to other libraries beyond Boston College. Use the Research Guides link to get some subject reference guidance or check out the Reference and Library Instruction link to see other ways reference can assist you. Finally, click on Libraries and Centers to get a list of all libraries and centers at your disposal.

The Libraries and You

- To borrow material from the libraries all you need is your student I.D. and you are ready to go. Undergraduates have a loan period of 28 days. By logging onto Your Account in Quest you can renew your books online.
- The O'Neill Library has group study rooms that can be reserved ahead of time. Ask at the O'Neill Circulation Desk.
- The Bapst Library's Gargan Hall is a quiet place to study.
- Current newspapers and magazines are received daily in each library.
- Films are available for viewing in the O'Neill Media Center.
- We do not have the book or journal you need? Talk to us about interlibrary loan possibilities.
- Free peer tutoring services at the Academic Development Center in O'Neill Library are worth checking out.
- Your wireless laptop will work in all of our libraries or use one of the many laptop connections in O'Neill.
- O'Neill Library has a workstation configured for patrons with vision impairment. Ask at O'Neill Library Reference.
- Get assistance from reference staff on using our many resources for your class work.
- You can connect to most of our electronic resources from your room, so access to library resources are available when the library is closed!

www.bc.edu/libraries

Chat with Us Using Our Ask 24/7 Service

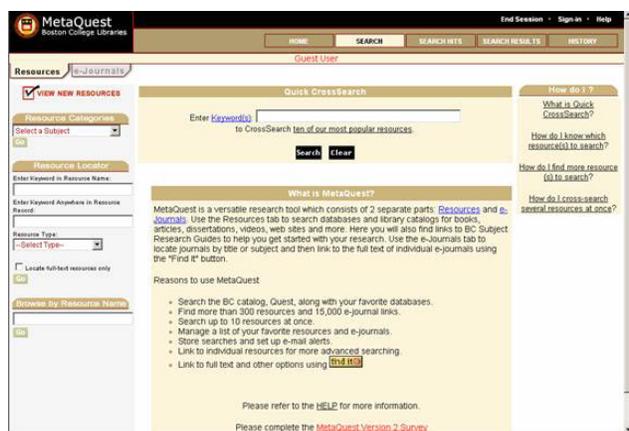

The Boston College Libraries now offer a service that better enables us to help students who are doing their library research outside of the library. Reference Now! allows member of the Boston College community to have a live, interactive, research consultation with a librarian.

Go to the library home page (www.bc.edu/libraries) and click Ask 24/7 under the heading SERVICES. Once you are logged in, half of your screen will show your typed message and the other half will allow you and the librarian to view the same catalog, database, or web site. We will be able to walk you through the search process for the resources we offer. The combination of chat software and shared screens enable us to be your virtual guide through resources that will help you find the information you need for your research.

What Does that Find It Button Do?

In many of the library's databases, after you have done a search, you will see a button called "Find It" which will help you find the full text or more information about a particular citation. When you click on the Find It button you will see a menu of choices related to that citation. Find It links you from one databases to many other databases owned by BC, so that you can easily find out how to get full text either online or in print. And if BC does not own the article or book you need, Find It will present you with a link to request the item from Interlibrary Loan. Find It expands your ability to find books and articles by linking the collections at BC and beyond. For questions about Find It, please see the frequently asked questions (<http://www.bc.edu/libraries/resources/databases/s-sfxfaq/>) or contact the O'Neill Reference Desk at refer@bc.edu or 617-552-4472.

Cross-search Databases Using MetaQuest

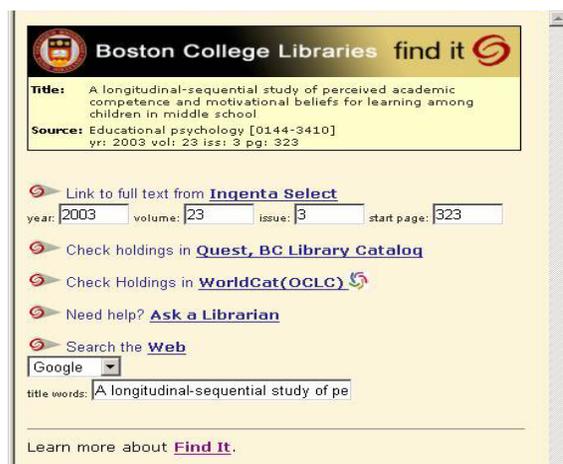

Student Newsletter Editor:
Kevin Tringale

RefWorks

RefWorks is a web-based bibliographic citation management tool which allows users to create personal collections of citations by easily importing references from hundreds of online databases. When the references are inserted into research papers, RefWorks will automatically format the footnotes and bibliography in seconds. RefWorks is available to users across various platforms including Windows, Mac and Unix.

To set up a personal RefWorks account, go to : <http://www.bc.edu/refworks> and click on "Sign up for an Individual Account." You'll be asked for your name, a login name, password and email address. Click on REGISTER.

For more information, please e-mail refworks@bc.edu or call 617-552-4472.

Have you ever wanted to search for books and articles from several different databases all at once? MetaQuest CrossSearch allows you to do this. MetaQuest is a research tool which contains links to hundreds of databases and library catalogs. MetaQuest allows you to cross search multiple databases using one simple search, to create your own list of favorite databases, and save your search results within MetaQuest. MetaQuest also links you to thousands of e-journals and includes links to the Libraries' subject research guides, as well as an e-mail alert feature which notifies you when new articles on your topic are added to a database. MetaQuest is available from the Libraries home page and at <http://metaquest.bc.edu>.

Layout:
Coleen Dunkley