The Master of Science in Sports Administration (MSSA) at Boston College addresses the challenges and opportunities of a rapidly growing, increasingly sophisticated American enterprise. Taught by leading industry professionals in courses focused on practice and application, this program is designed for sports managers, administrators, and coaches open to new ways of thinking, leading, and balancing the needs of the many stakeholders within an athletic system.

The MSSA emphasizes the development and cultivation of the individual, team, and organization through the building of an intentional culture of trust and commitment in keeping with Boston College’s Jesuit, Catholic traditions and values.

The M.S. in Sports Administration is a 10-course graduate degree program, offered full or part time, and designed to help professionals succeed in the workplaces of today and tomorrow.
